

Transition Readiness Program

The Wounded Warrior Regiment (WWR) provides individualized transition support to recovering service members (RSMs) through a transition readiness program (TRP) operated at each regiment location. Transition goals are a part of the comprehensive recovery plan (CRP) developed for RSMs who are assigned a recovery care coordinator (RCC). Goals and participation may vary, commensurate with each RSM’s medical and physical recovery; however, participation in the TRP is an expected daily activity while receiving WWR support. The TRP enhances RSMs’ recoveries and prepares them for transition back to duty, into a civilian education program, training, employment, entrepreneurship, and/or retirement.

Transition Process

The recovery care team (RCT) for every RSM is composed of the medical and battalion staff members most essential to their recovery planning. The transition specialist can and should be a member of the RCT; they are able to provide specialized skills and opportunities to both RSMs and family members. The overall transition planning process is phased, and allows for ongoing goal development as RSMs explore and understand various transition tracks and options. The tracks identified as transition goals are: employment, education, entrepreneurship, retirement, and return to duty.
